About Jeju island

Korea's largest and most attractive volcanic island, has beautiful landscape as well as geological value globally Jeju Island is located in southwest of Korean Peninsula and attained triple crown in natural field of UNESCO. Recognizing Jeju Island's unique volcanic landform and ecology along with remarkable natural beauty, UNESCO designated 'Jeju Volcanic Island and Lava Tubes' as World Natural Heritage (2007).

Climate of Jeju

During the late september, it is the boundary season between summer and fall in Jeju. The climate features a hot summer, the usual air temperature being 26 °C (highest 33 °C), highest water temperature of upper layers is 28 °C. It has a warm and dry autumn when the air is becoming cooler and water temperature remains as in summer (24 °C) until October.

Official Language

As the tourist trade in Jeju Island has grown larger in recent years, it is increasingly common to find some taxi drivers who speak English, Japanese and Chinese, especially in Jeju City. The vast majority of service and tourist industry workers, however, are still monolingual.

Natives of Jeju island speak a dialect of Korean that is very different in vocabularies rather than the accent compared to the standard dialect spoken in the Seoul area. But all staff in the tourist industry is required to speak standard Korean, so this will not be a problem in places such as bus terminals, the airport, and most districts in the city.
